NOTE TO [REDACTED]

25X1A

1. With regard to what appears abnormal replenishment activity in connection with [REDACTED] FAK, the following assumptions are made:

a. The FAK was not 100% complete at time of deployment.

b. The issues are being made to sub-activities in bulk as bench stock instead of meeting each individual requirement.

2. The items involved in great many cases appear to be standard-type items, readily available from Air Force stocks but in reality this is not the case as a thorough research was made prior to the establishing of the FAK listings to be sure that common items were not included. Most of these items are very small - special screws, special washers, etc. for test equipment and are therefor unique in themselves.

3. Project Directives and 400-1 prescribe that replenishment requisitions will be transmitted by electrical means on the 1st and 15th of each month. This is not being done.

4. Believe the communications load, particularly in the realm of cryptography, could be lightened materially by having all routine replenishment requisitions flow directly to [REDACTED] without info to Headquarters. This would place the responsibility on [REDACTED] for evaluation and advising Headquarters of any abnormal situation. Believe [REDACTED] thoroughly qualified to adequately monitor supply activities.
